

HealthMeasures User Forum Guidelines for Conduct

Oct 16, 2017

The HealthMeasures User Forum is an environment that supports peer-to-peer education and scientific exchange. HealthMeasures users are positioned to aid one another in advancing the science and application of person-centered assessment. This exchange is meant to facilitate that. We want to hear from many voices! Open exchange is encouraged; professionalism and respect are required. Disagreement and debate are welcome when communicated respectfully. Do not use profanity or derogatory terms. Posts that are considered to be judgmental of others, including those conveying racism, bigotry, or sexism are not acceptable. Individuals who engage in this behavior will be restricted from further participation. To protect the security of the site and forum process, spam posts and links to executable files will be removed. Any user who publishes spam to the forum will be blocked from future access. Content that the contributor does not have rights to distribute (e.g., full publications) will also be removed. Contact moderators at help@healthmeasures.net with questions about etiquette, membership, tech support, or anything else that is confusing.
